

ABSTRACT

A system of digitally controlling light output by 5 producing separate control signals for different colors of light. The light is contained in an optical waveguide, either prior to shaping or after shaping. Each of the control signals is coupled to a digitally controlled device which controls the shape of the light output. The digital 10 controlling device can be digital mirror devices, for example.